chapter began, and the next day my life changed forever. My mother held me tightly in her arms, and my aunt and uncle sat across from each other, still unable to believe what had happened. And the next morning we both woke up to go to the hospital, where oncologists confirmed to my mom and me that she had beaten the cancer. What was a seven-month battle had not gone well enough. The cancer had returned after two years of remission. I was nine years old and feeling all the emotions of my childhood—shock, guilt, fear, sorrow, and a quiet rage that my mother would not live. But as we stood in
